Great spaces aren't defined by a single piece of furniture. They are defined by how thoughtfully everything works together.

Start with the essentials. Then look around.

What gives someone a comfortable place for an impromptu conversation? Where does a visitor set a laptop or cup of coffee? What defines an open space without closing it off? Where can people display, organize, gather, recharge, or simply find a change of scenery?

Those questions are where ancillary products shine. They complete the workplace by adding the layers of comfort, utility, storage, flexibility, and personality that make an environment feel finished and ready to use.

And as workplaces become more dynamic, those layers are increasingly important. The office now has to accommodate more settings, more workstyles, and more reasons to come together. Designers are creating spaces that borrow from residential and hospitality environments while still meeting the demands of daily commercial use. Ancillary pieces help bridge those needs, bringing warmth and choice to spaces designed to perform.

Indiana Furniture makes it easier to carry that thinking throughout the workplace.

Don't just furnish a room, complete the experience.

Bring in Otty Ottomans for added comfort and mobile seating in collaborative and social spaces. Add organization and visual interest with Iconic bookcases and credenzas. Use planter boxes to incorporate greenery and define zones within open plans. Introduce floating shelves for storage and display without overwhelming the setting.

Add flexible Workmate Tables and Synergy Meeting Solutions where surfaces, privacy, collaboration, or space division are needed.

The result is less about adding "extras" and more about designing the entire experience.

Every product has a job to do.

Each product has a job to do. Each detail has a role to play. And when everything works together, spaces become more intuitive, useful, welcoming, and uniquely suited to the people who use them.

For ancillary needs, Indiana Furniture offers more choices, and more possibilities, to bring together complete workspaces.
